Norman Weathers is the owner of Cloud Connect, a popular electronic store in the eastern American city of Detroit. His is a bustling business but not many people seem to be aware of the fact that behind the façade of this legal business is an illegal operation fueling the black market. Though many suspect something to be amiss, nobody – except for those involved in the trade – is ever able to put a finger on the issue.

One fine morning Norman has a visitor in the shop. She is a pretty young girl and she is on the lookout for a new digital camera to present her father with on his birthday. As she is busy checking out the collection, one of his gang members point out that she is the daughter of the Reverend from the local church that his mother was a frequent visitor to. Soon he gets into a bet with Norman about bedding the pretty girl.

As someone who has a penchant for winning challenges, Norman accepts and goes on the charm-offensive to win over the girl. Though it takes some time, he finally makes a breakthrough and the two of them go out on a date for the first time. He finds it difficult to think of her as his winning ticket to a bet and soon they get close.

Things don't stop their and Norman fulfills his primary objective – that of bedding her. Soon she realizes that she is pregnant and is faced by an emotional turmoil as she does not know what to do. He is more than happy to accept the baby and shows himself to be supportive, even starting to change his ways in life so that the baby is not affected.

At this crucial juncture in life, Norman is dealt a major blow as his past comes to haunt him. His wife is kidnapped by a gang with whom he had had a failed business deal. Will the reformed gangster be able to save his future from the dark past or is the way forward as dark as Hell?
