Once again, the government bungled their latest laboratory experiments and created giant slimy mutated monsters. In an effort to discover the effects of radiation on all plants and animals, large and small, the government scientists created a huge unmitigated mess. Their tests were complete failures and they realized they were going to be held responsible for an imminent world shattering disaster. Because of the enormous size of the creatures, the government was unable to keep them confined, and the creatures escaped into the Florida Everglades where the testing facility was located.

A grieving family of six, attempting to forget the loss of their husband and father, whom suffered from a heart attack a few months ago, was cruising in the Atlantic ocean on their yacht. Unbeknownst to them, they were sailing into the depths of the Bermuda Triangle. As they sailed further into the Triangle, the family begins to notice a strange phenomenon. Soon, the family disembarks on an uncharted island, and is facing the very same dangerous mutated lab experiments that escaped from the Florida Everglades.

While fleeing from the monstrosities, they encounter a strange, warrior-like race that rescues the family and takes them into their domed city. The family and the warriors must work together to exterminate the monstrosities which lurk in the depths of the Bermuda Triangle, or face certain death. But first a new weapon must be invented in order to defeat these very large, new, and unknown life forms. The family wonders if they will ever see their home again.
