Do You Want to Make a Real Living as a Writer? You'll Have to Throw Out Everything You Know Let me guess—you're a talented writer who is willing to do whatever it takes to make a full-time living by writing. You've read countless articles and books on the subject, followed the suggestions in them, but you just can't seem to make the income leap. Or you may be a new writer who is convinced that you're missing something because your own experience isn't matching up to what you've read is possible. Or perhaps you've been moonlighting as a freelance writer for years, and you're convinced that it's simply not possible to quit your "real" job and do what you love full time. Let me tell you a secret. You've been lied to. Yes, you heard me correctly. Lied. To. Only about 10 percent of writers earn enough from working full time to support themselves. Ten percent. That's not something that all those other how-to writing books spend a lot of time on, is it? Luckily, there is a real solution. I know this because I've been doing it myself full time for years. But in order to be successful at it, you have to turn the current freelance writing working model on it's head. In fact, you pretty much have to throw everything you thought you knew out the window. What I'm talking about is a new system. One that doesn't limit a freelance writer's ability to make a great income because of time constraints. I'm talking about earning a living anyone would be proud of. In my new book, I'll show you how to create your own Writing Empire in 30 days or less.
